Shane makes Gold Cup history in perfect weekend at Madison

Jimmy Shane capped off a perfect weekend with a perfect ending by winning the APBA Gold Cup and the Indiana Governor's Cup at the Madison Regatta on Sunday.

Shane, driving the hometown U-6 Miss HomeStreet/Miss Madison, was the fastest qualifier and won all four preliminary heats. He was just as dominate in the final, taking advantage of a penalty by Andrew Tate to roll to the easy win.

The victory gave the Miss Madison team its fifth APBA Gold Cup title, but first on its home course since the magical 1971 season that inspired a movie.

"I'm honored to get a win here at Madison. It means a lot for me, but I'm more happy for the fans on the shoreline," Shane said. "This means the world to them and I'm just ecstatic that they're able to experience this. Forty-eight years later and their grandchildren get to experience what they got to experience in '71. It's just an honor to be a part of it."

Tate, the defending Gold Cup champion, brushed off a rough Saturday that saw him finish third twice in preliminary heats with the kind of Sunday that showed why he is the reigning National High Points Champion.

After two preliminary heat wins on Sunday, Tate grabbed the lead at the start of the final in his U-1 Delta/Realtrac and led throughout the first lap despite having the faster Shane on his inside. But Shane, who set a 2-mile course record in qualifying on Friday, simply had too much speed to contain.

"We really didn't want to be in lane one but the opportunity presented itself. I knew the boat was getting through that corner really well, better than all the other boats, so I took a chance, I took a risk," Shane said. "Andrew beat me to turn one and had a head of steam going to the finish line. But (crew chief) Mike (Hanson) gave me some legs and I was able to get it into the first turn."

Shane caught Tate in the first turn of the second lap and began to pull ahead when the Delta/Realtrac hit a rolling wave and hooked to the left. By the time Tate had righted his ship, Shane was gone.

"That hazard that has been there all week finally got me," Tate said of Madison's notorious first turn. "Congrats to the Miss Madison team. A great win and a historic win for the sport of hydroplane racing. We tried our best."

As it turned out, the incident with Tate proved to be anti-

Thurston pitches scoreless relief inning

COURIER STAFF REPORT
sports@madisoncourier.com

Madison's Ryan Thurston pitched a scoreless inning in the Gary SouthShore RailCats' 7-5 loss at Cleburne, Texas on Saturday.

Thurston, a left-hander, entered the game in the eighth inning with Gary SouthShore trailing the Railroaders 6-5 and retired all three batters he faced without issuing a walk or striking out a batter.

Thurston

Cleburne then scored a run in the ninth off of another Gary reliever for the final margin.

The outing lowered Thurston's ERA to 3.00 on the season.

He is now 3-0 overall and has allowed eight earned runs on 18 hits in 21 innings pitched with 17 strikeouts and nine walks.

US Women win 4th World Cup title

LYON, France (AP) — After every goal celebration and all the confident posturing, the U.S. national team backed up its swagger at the Women's World Cup by winning it all.

The Americans also took a swipe at gender inequity, too.

The United States won its record fourth Women's World Cup title and second in a row, beating the Netherlands 2-0 Sunday night when Megan Rapinoe converted a tiebreaking penalty kick in the second half. Rose Lavelle added a goal to seal it.

Afterward, Rapinoe looked out on the sea of reporters and said, "I've got a party to get to, y'all."

Rapinoe scored in the 61st minute after a video review determined Stefanie van der Gragt had fouled Alex Morgan with a kick to the shoulder while competing for a deflected pass in the penalty area.

Two days past her 34th birthday, Rapinoe slotted the ball past Sari van Veenendaal for her sixth goal of the tournament. She became the oldest player to score in a Women's World Cup final, and earned the Golden Boot for the tournament's top scorer and the Golden Ball as the top player.

Her preferred goal celebration in France, with her outstretched arms in victory, was already on T-shirts.

"I feel like it's kind of iconic of everything that we have gone through and we continue to go through, and yet we put this beautiful product out on the pitch," she said.

Lavelle, at 24 the team's up-and-coming star, added her third goal of the tournament on an 18-yard left-footed shot in the 69th after a solo run from the center circle.

The monthlong journey isn't over quite yet for players who captured the hearts of a nation. New York City Mayor Bill de Blasio needed just a few seconds after the match to invite the team to a ticker-tape parade up the Canyon of Heroes in Manhattan on Wednesday.

Fans, many dressed in red, white and blue, chanted "Equal Pay!" at the final whistle, a reminder players sued the U.S. Soccer Federation in March claiming gender discrimination. The sides have agreed to mediate the lawsuit.

Rapinoe drew the ire of President Donald Trump by saying she would refuse to visit the White House. Trump called out Rapinoe on Twitter, saying she should never "disrespect our Country, the White House, or our Flag, especially since so much has been done for her & the team." He said he would invite the team win or lose.

But shortly after the title game, Trump tweeted: "Congratulations to the U.S. Women's Soccer Team on winning the World Cup! Great and exciting play. America is proud of you all!"

Always outspoken, Rapinoe also called out FIFA on the eve of the championship, suggesting soccer's governing body was not doing enough to grow the women's game, pointing to unequal prize money and the scheduling of the final on the same day as the championships of the CONCACAF Gold Cup in Chicago and the Copa America final in Brazil.

The Americans never trailed at the tournament and set records with 26 goals and a 12-game World Cup winning streak dating to 2015. Jill Ellis became the first coach to lead a team to two Women's World Cup titles, and the U.S. joined Germany in 2003 and 2007 as the only repeat champions. While the U.S. has four titles, Germany is the only other nation with even two.

"Getting to play at the highest level of the World Cup with the team we have is just ridiculous. But to be able to couple that with everything on the field and to back up all of those words with performances and to back up all of those performances with words, it's just incredible," Rapinoe said.

With confidence that some called arrogance, this American team established a standard that exceeded the U.S. champions of 1991, 1999 and 2015, becoming a goal for all others to match. Mia Hamm and Brandi Chastain were among the former American players who joined the current generation for the postgame celebration.

Alyssa Naeher, the 31-year-old who succeeded Hope Solo in goal, faced repeated questions entering the tournament but allowed just three goals and finished with her fourth shutout, earning the Golden Glove for the tournament's best goalkeeper.

The U.S. had scored within the first 12 minutes of its previous six matches but the European champions sat back to keep their defensive shape and kept the score 0-0 through the first half.

Rapinoe, who missed Tuesday's semifinal win over England with a hamstring injury, became the first woman to score on a penalty kick during a Women's World Cup final, her 50th goal in 158 international appearances. She ended the Netherlands' 317-minute scoreless streak and matched Morgan and England's Ellen White for most goals in the tournament, winning the Golden Ball based on fewer minutes.

GPW North American Championship

Preston's team makes repairs just in time to win Grand Prix final

By ROB LAFARY
Courier Staff Writer
sports@madisoncourier.com

Defending national champion Ed Preston spent the majority of the weekend watching from the Madison Regatta pits after his GP-20 Truss Co. went dead in the water during Grand Prix World Supercharged Heat 1A on Saturday afternoon.

But in the end the team's long, hard work was able to resurrect the boat just in the nick of time.

After more than 24 hours of repairs to the GP-20, Preston pulled off a stunning finish, grabbing the lead from race front-runner Greg Hopp midway through Sunday's final heat and pulling away to win his second-straight Grand Prix World North American Championship at Madison.

After two weeks worth of struggles, everything finally came together for the Blown Income Racing team, allowing one of the sport's best drivers to get back to running out front.

"This is fantastic," an elated Preston said. "With the crew that I have — we are a bunch of old guys — so for all of us to work on the boat the way we did was just amazing and we were confident in the repairs. We finally got into the lane I wanted in and that's when we started to see the results."

The race appeared to be a runaway early on with Hopp, the national points leader in the GP-15 Miss SuperShine Happy Go Lucky, distancing himself from the field after an early challenger, the Meadows Cul-de-Sac Presents GP-55 driven by Jamie Nilsen, went dead in the water on the first lap. Then, with no apparent reason at the time, Hopp's boat slowed and Preston, sitting in third place, started gaining ground.

After sailing past Kevin Eacret, whose GP-18 Dan Cole Sells Cars was in second place, Preston's quest for the lead reached its climax on lap three. The GP-20 sailed past Hopp in turn two and Preston was never challenged the rest of the race while picking up his first win of the season.

"Last week I made the mistake of taking a lane I didn't want and I didn't make that mistake today," Preston said. "I wanted lane three to start but ended up in four but we really thought if we could overlap Kevin (Eacret) and get into lane three then we would be good to go. When you're on the outside it takes two or three laps to get to whoever is leading the race. If you can get through the corners clean and then put your foot down on the pedal then you've got a shot."

In order to put his foot down, Preston's GP-20 needed an engine that would run hard enough to generate such speed, not to mention allow the boat to even be on the water. After going down in Heat 1A, Preston's crew spent the rest of Saturday and up until the final heat on Sunday putting a new engine in the GP-20 among other minor repairs. Although the team missed three heats in-between, the work certainly paid off.

"It felt like we worked all day and night," Preston said of the repairs. "We knew we had a good engine to put in the boat but it was going to take a lot of work and a lot of prep on the engine to get the boat ready. We even had some hull damage that we had to work on as well so I mean we just worked our tails off. We got the engine in and it all worked out in the end."

Hopp managed to hang on for a second place finish over Eacret despite a radical change in boat speed. After the race, the GP-15 driver revealed his own boat was dealing with mechanical issues and that his hopes for finishing the race at top speed were too good to be true.

"It was unfortunate," Hopp said. "Right before the final we found some metal flakes up in our gear and we were having bearing issues as well. We changed the oil out and we gave it a shot. We thought we could race five miles and ended up only being three. The boat started shaking and vibrating and the oil pressure was going down. At that point I just wanted to finish the race so I was glad to see us go across the finish line. All the parts are still inside motor. They're probably not good but the good thing is they are still in the motor."

A winner of two heats in Madison along with claiming a GPW championship in Guntersville last weekend, Hopp maintains his spot atop in the national high points standings and is looking to keep it that way in order to upend Preston at season's end.

"It just killed me today, especially when my dad (Jerry Hopp) was on the radio saying that Ed was coming up on me and I knew there was nothing I could do about it," Hopp said. "The good thing is we have the high points lead on those guys. If I hadn't have finished that final heat I wouldn't have got any points. I got second and picked up 95 points. We are still up about two full heats in the standings and the ultimate goal is a national championship."

Eacret finished third in the final, allowing Hopp Racing's two drivers to place on the podium for a second-straight weekend. Nilsen along with Bobby Stevenson in the GP-59 Baby Doll III did not finish and was towed back to the pits after the race.

The GPW series continues later this month when it travels alongside the H1 Unlimited circuit to the Tri-Cities, Washington, to race on the Columbia River July 26-28.

Ed Preston celebrates on the dock (above) after winning Sunday's Grand Prix World Supercharged final heat at Madison. The team battled engine issues all weekend and crew chief Earl Smith and the crew spent a day and a half installing a new motor (left). By Sunday's final heat the boat was flying high and fast (top) as Preston overtook season points leader Greg Hopp for his second consecutive win at Madison. Hopp Racing's Grand Prix team has its work cut out to keep points lead momentum rolling

Crew's diversity of skills has team looking to win GPW series title in 2019

By ROB LAFARY
Courier Staff Writer
sports@madisoncourier.com

With the Grand Prix World series heading to Tri-Cities at the end of the month, Hopp Racing's GP-15 Happy Go Lucky crew chief Brett Holloway and full-time crew member Jimme James face the tall task of helping driver Greg Hopp make the necessary repairs to an engine that was damaged before and during Sunday's North American Championship final heat in Madison.

No doubt, the repairs will certainly be made as the boat continues its pursuit of a national high points championship but such work will have to be done late at night and into the wee hours of the morning at the team's boat shop. After all, Holloway and James have rather impressive day jobs they have to tend to first.

For Holloway, who also serves as crew chief for the team's GP-18 boat driven by Kevin Eacret, boats, motorcycles and automotives have been a way of life and it shows. A business owner by trade, Holloway's time spent as a motorcycle racer paved the way for an early career designing distance ramps for motorcycle jumpers.

"I started designing in 1996," Holloway said of his unusual career. "I actually owned a business that built ramps for distance and that led to me having the opportunity to design ramps for the X Games and that evolved into my business specializing in those ramifications alongside the motorcycle ramps. I did that for a number of years and built ramps for guys like Seth Enslow, Ryan Capes and other big-time distance jumpers."

As Holloway's career progressed, the Lake Stevens, Washington, native split his time between the world of boat racing and auto racing. His new business venture serves his appetite for auto racing along with an appetite for cars in general.

"I've been involved with all kinds of racing with the offshore racing and auto racing before I came into hydroplane racing," Holloway said. "Now I own a shop called Plan B Garage that is out of Arlington, Washington. We actually build race cars, race car chassis, kinetics, design, all that kind of stuff. We also build pro touring cars and custom hot rods and then do classic car restoration on top of it."

James, the team's only full-time crew member aside from Holloway, can easily be spotted in the pit area at race sites around the country. Sporting long black hair, black jeans and a black top hat while working on the GP-15, it's a guessing game for the average eye on what the Washington native does for a living. And most guesses would probably be wrong.

Away from the water, James' career is to aid the design of airplanes rather than hydroplanes. James works as an engineer for Boeing.

"Yeah, man, I design airplane doors," James said. "Certainly different from the boat racing side of my life but I enjoy doing it and it's a lot of fun designing doors and engineering them for aircraft all over the world. Not to mention I have a wife and grandchildren so I try my best to split my time between work, play and family."

And when not designing doors, there's a racer inside of James, who races out west in the smallest rendition of the sport.

"I race scaled unlimited RC boats," James noted. "I've been a national champion three of the last four years back in the northwest so we get about 10 races each year. Throw that on to five or six races a year in the Grand Prix series so it's certainly a busy life when you factor in everything I do but I wouldn't trade it. There's never a dull moment and you just do it because you love doing it."

Holloway said he lives the same hectic lifestyle. Back-to-back weekends on the road with the two Hopp Racing entries at Guntersville Lake in Alabama and Madison was a reminder in itself.

"I've been involved with all sorts of racing plus the businesses that I have run so certainly there's not a lot of down time but I enjoy doing what I do," Holloway said. "I have great people around me that support what I do and that is always a big help."

But once the sun sets, both are at the boat shop with Hopp and the three primarily spearhead all repairs and adjustments to the two-boat team. While Hopp has his specialties with the boats he operates, the other two split up duties that play to their strong suits. While one takes care of the framework, the other takes care of the mechanics.

"I couldn't do this without Jimme," Holloway said of his fellow crew member. "Jimme is on all the kinetics of the boat, the skid fin, how the boat turns and how the boat handles with speed and things like that. I focus on mechanical aspects of the boat so I'm dealing with the engine a lot. Plus there's the overall details I oversee as a crew chief."

Part of James' work was on display the last two weekends in Guntersville and Madison. The GP-15 was the recipient of a new skid fin for the 2019 season and all that work can be credited to James, who earned his driver's trust to make sure the piece would be a reliable asset to the team's success. "There's just something about boat racing and what I love about it is that there's no set way in how things work," James, a former crew chief on the U-99.9 Miss Rock Unlimited hydroplane three years ago said. "It's not completely figured out so I spend a lot of time designing parts for the boat. Greg (Hopp) let me put on the new skid fin for the GP-15 this year and it had been something I had worked on for years. He finally said I could put it on the boat and so far it is doing its job. It keeps me wanting to make more parts."

Hopp Racing is thankful for the two and all the work they contribute. Greg Hopp says the two are valuable assets to the race team and to his boat all year long. He noted the work the two do on top of their everyday lives is admirable and means the world to him.

"I can't begin to tell you how key those guys are," Hopp said. "They are my rock and my friends and I enjoy spending time around those guys no matter where we are. Without them and the work they put in, we would never be able to do this let alone put a boat on the water. They are big to the success that we have."

Miss Madison Racing re-creates iconic win 48 years later

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Courier Staff Writer
dcampbell@madisoncourier.com

They may not make a movie out of this win, but that doesn't mean that Sunday's victory in the APBA Gold Cup will be any less sweet for the Miss Madison Racing Team and its adoring fans.

Forty-eight years after Jim McCormick made history by steering the community-owned Miss Madison to a win in the prestigious Gold Cup on its home waters, another driver named Jim repeated the feat with a victory Sunday aboard the newest Miss Madison, which is sponsored by HomeStreet Bank out of Seattle.

Jimmy Shane, who already has three Gold Cups to his credit in the past five years for the Miss Madison team, added another to the trophy case by running past his opponents and dominating every heat of racing. It was hardly the upset that McCormick's win represented in 1971, but it was no less special to those that were on hand to watch.

"This is a great day for all of us. My dream has always been that we would get the Gold Cup back and repeat 1971," said Tony Steinhardt, who played a pivotal role on that 1971 crew and has served on the team's board of directors since 1966. "The emotions with this team always kicks in. A lot of people realize we started this team in 1961, but nobody knows what we've been through."

The Miss Madison Team had two other chances to win the Gold Cup on its home course prior to Sunday but the team was nowhere near in contention in either 1979 or 1980.

But this year was going to be different and everybody knew it. Shane and the HomeStreet crew have won eight of the last 10 National High Points championships and dominated the season opener on Guntersville Lake in Alabama a week earlier.

Ever since the Madison Regatta secured the rights to the Gold Cup in April, the team has circled the race on its calendar, determined to repeat history.

"I don't think anybody here is in it for themselves. It's about the city, it's about the state and it's of course for our sponsors," Steinhardt said. "But our heart is right here. That's the important thing."

That feeling of community permeated the riverfront. Each time Shane flew by on the race course, the home crowd roared its approval. Indiana Governor Eric Holcomb, who was named an honorary crewmember just before the final, hooted and hollered from the pits like the fan he has become as Shane crossed the finish line to claim the win.

And then there was Shane. Although a native of Maryland who now calls the Seattle area home, Shane has embraced Madison and the fans have hugged him back. For two weeks, Shane talked about what it would mean to bring the Gold Cup back home to the fans in Madison and he was emotional on Sunday as he described the win.

"It means everything. This is the town. This town is boat racing," said Shane, who later recreated McCormick's post-race victory ride down Vaughn Drive with his sons Colton and Hudson by his side just as McCormick made the same drive with son Mike in 1971. "I have the best fan base in the world and I can't thank them enough."

One of Shane's first stops after getting out of the boat was to embrace retired team president Bob Hughes. The heart of the team for four decades, the ailing Hughes watched the race from a golf cart in the pits and smiled as the boat he has supported for much of his adult life brought home the biggest prize in the sport.

"Bob has meant the world to this team. He joined us in 1970 and we would never have gotten to this point without him," current team president Charlie Grooms said. "It's cool that he has gotten a chance to see another Gold Cup."

The Miss HomeStreet/Miss Madison team now turns its sights toward finishing off the season and winning its ninth national championship, but they'll never forget winning the Gold Cup on their home course and repeating the feat they had heard so much about. Like McCormick, Steinhardt, crew chief Dave Stewart and the rest of the crew, this year's team is now a part of history.

"I'm just ecstatic that they're able to experience this. Forty-eight years later and their grandchildren get to experience what they got to experience in '71," Shane said of the fans. "It's just an honor to be a part of it."

Temp course leaves Courier 10K runners gassed at finish

By MARK CAMPBELL
Courier Sports Editor
mcampbell@madisoncourier.com

The winners podium of the 2019 Madison Courier 10K Run was filled with familiar faces but that was the only thing familiar about the 41st running of the Madison Regatta Weekend road race.

Times were higher and smiles were fewer thanks to a temporary — at least most runners hope temporary — rerouting of the 6.2-mile course to send runners back to a finish line at Madison Consolidated High School's Cub Field rather than the traditional dash down Hanging Rock Hill and up Third Street to Lytle Park in downtown Madison.

Kristopher Sandlin, 27, of Vevay, ran the course first overall in 33:47 for his record fifth Courier 10K win with former Hanover College runner Logan Wells, 26, now of Ada, Ohio, taking second in 34:15 and Carter Leak, 18, of North Vernon, third in 34:32. Leah Anders, 18, of Rising Sun, was ninth overall and the top female in 42:09 for her second consecutive and third overall win in the event.

And while the cream once again rose to the top, the new road course proved to be a curdling experience for most.

The course change, made necessary by road work that prevented the traditional finish down Hanging Rock Hill, proved to be a far greater challenge than most runners were accustomed. A wave of hills to the finish on an overcast day when the temperature was still in the mid-70s with 100 percent humidity left runners gassed at the finish.

"Oh yeah, it's tougher. You saw how hot and humid it already was this morning and then you add that hill on the backside instead of going down Hanging Rock and, whew, if you had any momentum you lost it all right there," said Sandlin, showing more exhaustion than in any of his previous wins. "Then you have these two hills coming back on Wilson Avenue and that just adds to it ... If the sun had been out it would have been a lot slower. I ran this course a few times — really easy runs — but that doesn't prepare you for the way a race will challenge you."

Sandlin put some distance on his closest challengers — Wells and Leak — on the Wilson Avenue run back to the finish but he never felt comfortable with his lead and the farthest thing from his concern was the fact that his time was creeping higher than any of his other wins.

"I started pulling away on that first uphill on Wilson Avenue and then ran the rest of the thing pretty much by myself," Sandlin said. "But I was running scared because those two guys behind me are definitely really strong and accomplished runners so I knew I really couldn't let off the gas ... After hearing some of the splits, I was just thinking, awe man, just run and give the effort and don't worry about the times too much because it's hilly and hot and humid and those three things don't make for good times."

As brutal as the course was for the winner, it was just as bad or worse for those trying to catch him. If misery loves company there was a pity party at the top.

"It's not even close to the same course," Wells said. "I would not describe it as fun. That's not the word that I would use … to go from having that downhill mile four that you can look forward to, to having an uphill that you've got to dread at mile four is a huge difference. It's a whole different mindset. The times were out the window today. You just tried to compete."

Anders who has been training feverishly all summer preparing for her freshman cross country season at the University of Southern Indiana, said if not for all that hard work she might have been a walker by the finish.

Anders pulled away from her closest competition for first female a quarter-mile into the race and then ran alone or with the top 10 men the rest of the way. In the end she posted a 4:48 win over the next female finisher, Staci Fiddler, 49, of Bedford, Indiana, with a 46:57. Kinley Kunkel, 14, of Bedford, Kentucky, was the third female in 47:17.

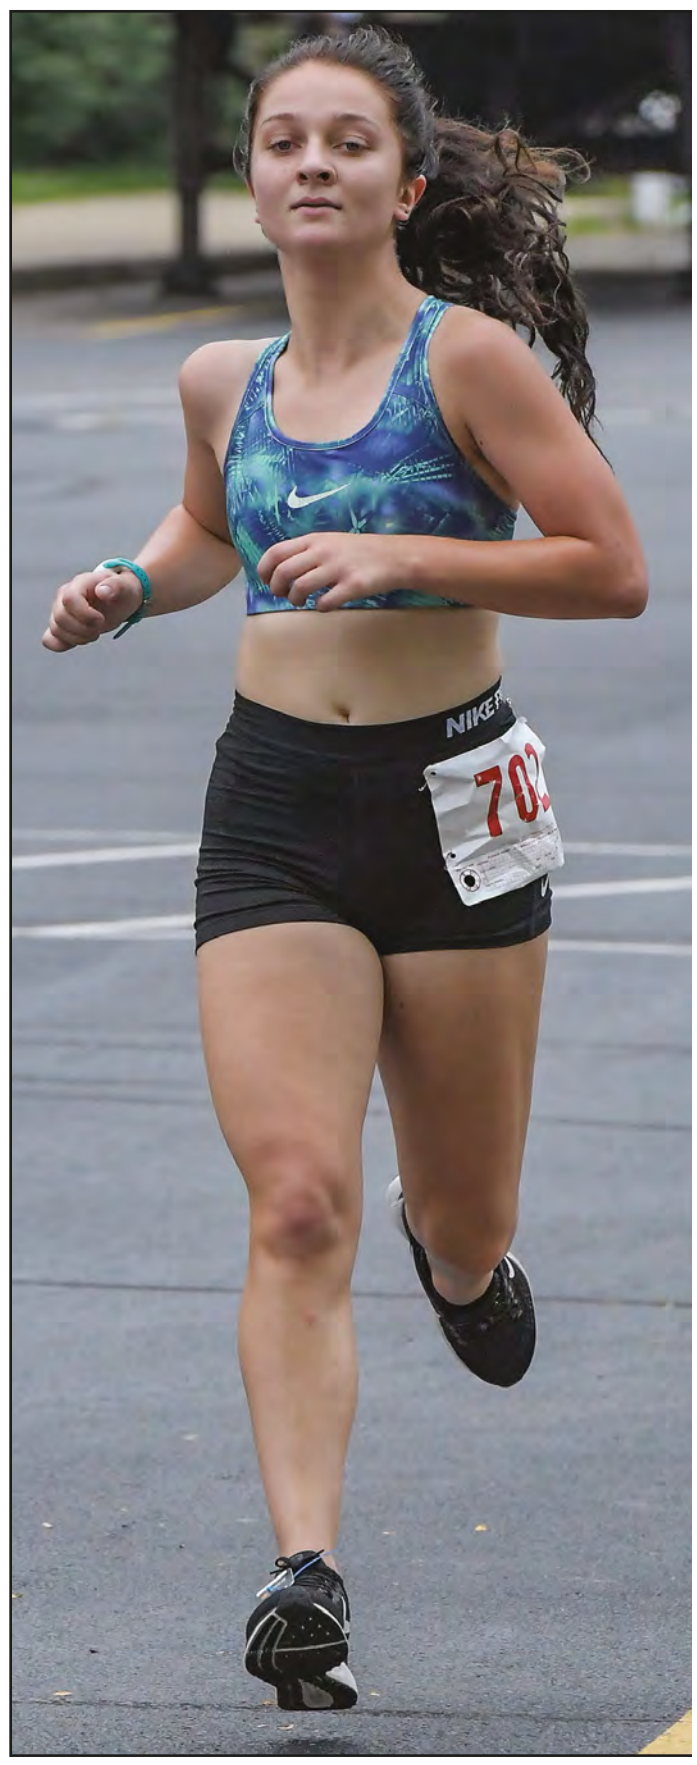
"If I hadn't been training so hard this summer to prepare for college I probably would have been walking it in," Anders said. "Oh my gosh this course is awful. Oh, it's so bad. This is the only road 10K that I run throughout the year and taking that downhill out is so bad … my feet went completely numb. It was bad."

"She's putting in work this summer. She's doing a real good job and doing all the little things right and getting herself prepared for college and she's going to do an awesome job in college," said Sandlin, who was Anders' coach at Switzerland County High School. "It's a gutsy course for her, but I'd say she's a lot tougher than I am. Like I said, she's tough kid and she's a lot further along than I ever was at that point in my career."

A total of 159 runners — 80 males and 79 females — competed in the run with another 68 — 39 females and 29 males — participating in the walk. The walk is non-competitive, but there was a close finish by two determined walkers this season as Dan Leach, 64, of Bedford, Indiana, finished with a time of 1:11.19 to just edge perennial first walker Steven R. Floyd, 64, of Bloomington, at 1:11.34. The first female was Carrie Blades, 51, of Madison, in 1:19:16.

Sandlin's fifth Courier 10K win gives him two more than any other runner but many of those wins have been at Wells' expense. Wells said he'll keep chasing Sandlin until he finally gets a win.

"I'll keep coming back. I'll keep coming back until I win it," Wells, the son of Hanover College cross country coach Brady Wells said. "I've gotten second like three or four times now so I'll keep coming back until I can beat this guy."



Kristopher Sandlin (above left) runs in a lead pack with Logan Wells (783) and Carter Leak (center) near the start of Saturday's 41st annual Madison Courier 10K Run. Sandlin, 27, Vevay, eventually pulled away from the two younger runners to win his record fifth Courier 10K in 33:47, the second highest time in the history of the event as the road race shifted to a more challenging course this year during road work on Hanging Rock Hill. Leah Anders (right) was ninth overall and the top female finisher. The 18-year-old recent graduate of Switzerland County, who ran in high school with Sandlin as her coach, clocked in at 42:09. GOING FOR GOLD: Jimmy Shane and the U-6 HomeStreet/Miss Madison (left) capped a perfect weekend on the Ohio River by powering away from Andrew Tate and the U-1 Delta Realtrac (right) during Sunday's winner-take-all Gold Cup and Indiana Governor's Cup final. The win was Shane's fourth Gold Cup and Miss Madison Racing's fifth, but the first on the Madison team's home waters since the historic Gold Cup won by Jim McCormick in 1971. climactic. While he recovered and finished second physically, a pervious one-minute penalty for jumping the gun pushed Tate to fifth place.

Canadian Bert Henderson finished second in the U-7 Spirit of Detroit to cap a strong weekend that saw him win a preliminary heat on Saturday afternoon.

"I love this town. What a great place to hold a Gold Cup," said the Brockville, Ontario, native. "I can't think of a better way to end the weekend."

J. Michael Kelly spent the weekend hoping to play the role of spoiler in his U-12 Graham Trucking and looked the part on Saturday with a win and a second place against Tate in the prelims. But the normally unflappable driver committed the kind of mistake he never makes when he missed his timing marks and started the final heat nearly two roostertails behind the leaders.

Kelly never truly made up the ground but he was able to pass the trailing Tom Thompson and take home third place after Tate was penalized.

"I'm honored to get a win here at Madison. It means a lot for me, but I'm more happy for the fans on the shoreline. This means the world to them and I'm just ecstatic that they're able to experience this. Forty-eight years later and their grandchildren get to experience what they got to experience in '71. It's just an honor to be a part of it."

Jimmy Shane on winning the Gold Cup at Madison for the first time since 1971

"It's not the way I wanted to finish third. I messed up the start and started a little late. I don't want to gain spots because of calls," Kelly said. "I'm just glad to be back in Madison. I've missed the last two years. This race course is so challenging; it swallowed me in that first turn earlier in the day and almost cost us from even making the first row in the final. I love this place and everybody here and I hope to be back next year."

Thompson survived several penalties on the weekend to place fourth in the U-11 J&D's. Rookie Corey Peabody was unable to start the final in his U-98 Graham Trucking.

Along with his win in the final, Shane also won four of the eight preliminary heats on the weekend and set the Madison course records for both a two-mile average and a 4-mile average on Friday. His speed of 149.653 mph in a single lap eclipsed Dave Villwock's average of 148.837 set in 2012 driving the Spirit of Qatar.

"Villwock was an amazing legend in our sport and it is truly an honor to whup one of his speed records," Shane said.

The victory was the 19th of Shane's career, moving him past his predecessor with Miss Madison Racing, Steve David, into sole possession of sixth place on the career H1 Unlimited wins list. It was also his fourth Gold Cup championship in the last six years.

With only a jumping the gun penalty in a preliminary at Guntersville keeping Shane from a perfect season so far, the Miss HomeStreet pilot has run away with the National High Points lead. He currently holds a 1,071-point lead over Kelly and a 1,556-point over Henderson with just three races left on the season.

After two races east of the Mississippi River, the H1 Unlimited Hydroplane Series turns west for the rest of the season starting with the Columbia Cup in the Tri-Cities, Washington July 26-28.

Regatta Festival steps off

Everyone loves a parade. Among the 110 entrants Friday night were the honor guard from the Major Samuel Woodfill Post #9 of the American Legion and the Gold Cup on display. The parade was two nights before Madison claimed the cup for the next year when the Miss Home Street/Miss Madison won the race Sunday.

Ed Muncey, son of Bill Muncey, one of the great unlimited drivers of all time, and his mother, Fran, waved to parade-watchers. Larry Humes (left) and his brother, Willie, who were Madison High School basketball legends and went on to set sports records throughout their careers, joined other sports greats in the line-up. Vintage community mourns loss of driver

Courier staff writer

Rick Beatty, owner and driver of the vintage H-202 Heavy Duty, was running test laps on the Ohio River Saturday when he was ejected from the open cockpit of the boat in the lower corner of the race course and sustained fatal head injuries.

Beatty, 60, of Dayton Ohio, was an avid boat racing fan and owner and driver of vintage hydroplanes. He had purchased the Heavy Duty in 2017, a 7-Litre modified hydroplane built by legendary boat designer/builder Henry Lauterbach in 1964 and powered by a 454-cubic-inch Chevy motor, but he also owned several other hydroplanes, race boats and speed boats. His family kept one of his pleasure boats docked in Aurora, Indiana.

Fellow vintage owner and driver Bill McTague, of Batavia, Ohio, knew Beatty through their vintage racing and was getting to know him better since McTague owned and drove the Justa Pest N56 and Beatty owned the Justa-Pest II. The two ate breakfast together Saturday morning and were running in the same heat at the time of the crash.

McTague described the crash as a "freak accident" and said nothing appeared wrong with Beatty's boat until he saw it stopped in the water at the crash site.

"I did not see it happen but it is such a freak accident. It was a single-boat fatality. I came around the turn and the boat was sitting there and he wasn't in it," McTague said.

Boats like Beatty's and McTague's Justa Pest have open cockpits and accidents often result in ejection of the driver. This is apparently what happened to Beatty on Saturday when his craft hit a wave or something else and ejected him from the seat.

Madison Courier sports writer David Campbell was walking through the pit area at the Madison Regatta Saturday morning and snapped this photo of a driver preparing to go out on the water. He later realized he had taken a picture of Rick Beatty, driver of the vintage H-202 Heavy Duty. Beatty was killed during the run when he was thrown from his boat. The man with his back to the camera was not identified.

Witnesses in the vintage pits said the rudder on Beatty's boat was apparently damaged in the incident, leading some to speculate that the boat might have struck a piece of debris in the Ohio River, causing it to lose momentum quickly, veer to the left and eject the driver.

Jefferson County Coroner Rodney Nay said Beatty was pulled from the water by safety and rescue personnel, who could not find a pulse. EMTs administered cardio pulmonary resuscitation en route to King's Daughters' Hospital in Madison where he was pronounced dead at 12:06 p.m. Results of an autopsy said Beatty died of head injuries.

"The water conditions were not bad. It was just truly a freak accident," McTague said. "And I just can't get my head around it. I just don't understand it.

"He loved boats. At last count I know he owned 11 boats — hydroplanes and vintage racing crafts. He loved the sport," McTague said of Beatty. "We had breakfast this morning with him, me and my wife at the hotel, and he was a little bit disturbed that we didn't get in the water yesterday because of the conditions and everything. He said, 'If they don't put us in the water today, I'm going home. I've got a life.' And that was the last thing I think I will ever remember him saying."

News of Beatty's death saddened boat racers throughout the pits for the 2019 APBA Gold Cup and Indiana Governor's Cup race weekend.

Madison Regatta President Matt True issued a statement on behalf of the volunteer organization that stages the annual boat races.

"It is with great sadness that Madison Regatta Inc. announces the passing of vintage boat owner and driver Rick Beatty of Dayton, Ohio. Beatty, 60, succumbed to injuries he sustained in an exhibition appearance Saturday July 6, on the Ohio River.

"Beatty, a consummate boat racing fan, took his love for hydroplanes even further by owning and driving numerous vintage racers like the H-202 Heavy Duty he acquired in 2017 and was piloting at the time of the accident. Rick was doing what he loved in a boat he loved.

"The Madison Regatta Inc., our many volunteers and fans offer our deepest sympathies to the family of Rick Beatty, the entire H-202 Heavy Duty race team and the vintage racing community.

"Vintage racers are keepers of our sport's heritage and in many ways the heart and soul of hydroplane racing and Rick will be missed."

As executive director of the Hydroplane and Raceboat Museum in Seattle, David Williams has driven 18 different unlimited hydroplanes from seven different decades and published several books on unlimited racing to become somewhat of an expert on vintage racing. He issued a statement Saturday on behalf of the museum.

"We tend to think that just because we are running exhibitions, and it isn't 'real racing' that it isn't really dangerous," Williams wrote. "Physics can't tell the difference between 100 mph in a race or 100 mph in an exhibition. This breaks my heart."

The Heavy Duty pulled out of the Madison pits later Saturday afternoon to begin the team's somber drive back to Dayton. The remainder of the vintage exhibition was also canceled.

By Sunday all vintage teams had left the Madison pits. There was a moment of silence in Beatty's memory during opening ceremonies before Sunday's APBA Gold Cup and Indiana Governor's Cup H1 Unlimited hydroplane finals and the Grand Prix World Supercharged North American Championship.

Beatty's death was the second racing fatality in the 69-year history of the Madison Regatta, both coming in either vintage or underclasses. Jim Clark, of Gibraltar, Michigan, died in a racing accident at Madison in 1962 when his 266-cubic-inch class hydroplane nosed into the Ohio River.

Scipio man recovering from flesh-eating bacteria infection

By JULIE MCCLURE
(Columbus) The Republic

A local man is being treated at an Indianapolis hospital after being infected with flesh-eating bacteria from an unknown source.

Kurt Carlsen, 61, Scipio, who has been the chief mechanic for the Columbus Police Department for 40 years and also works at Rural King, has been recovering at IU Health Methodist Hospital in Indianapolis since late June, after being diagnosed with the bacteria after seeking treatment at Schneck Medical Center in Seymour.

He was listed in stable condition at Methodist on Friday, hospital officials said.

Necrotizing fasciitis, commonly known as flesh-eating disease, is a rare bacterial infection that spreads quickly in the body and can cause death, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. Accurate diagnosis, rapid antibiotic treatment and prompt surgery are used to stop the infection. Fever, dizziness, or nausea soon after an injury or surgery are symptoms for the disease, classified into four types, depending on the infecting organism. Between 55% and 80% of cases involve more than one type of bacteria.

Carlsen, speaking by telephone from the Indianapolis hospital on Friday, said the ordeal began June 23 when he noticed that a pimple on his derriere had turned into a boil, and the pain was becoming increasingly worse. He first went to PromptMed in Columbus, where he received antibiotics and painkillers, and was told that if he was not better by the following day, to obtain further medical help.

When his fever and pain did not subside, Carlsen called his son asking him to take him to the Schneck emergency room, where doctors there were immediately concerned.

"The door of my room was a revolving door of doctors," Carlsen said. "They told me they were assembling an emergency surgery team and that I would have surgery. I woke up three days later."

Carlsen had several surgeries to remove the infection and was told by Schneck doctors it had been diagnosed as flesh-eating bacteria.

"They told me that if I hadn't gone to the emergency room, within four to six hours I wouldn't be here," Carlsen said. "This just about killed me."

At Methodist, Carlsen is undergoing intensive wound treatment and the wound is now under control, from what he has been told, he said.

"I have a long road to recovery," Carlsen said, adding that he will have to have plastic surgery and skin grafts to repair the areas where surgeons removed the bacteria.

Carlsen said he doesn't know how he could have contracted the bacteria.

In the United States, three individuals who were vacationing in Florida or other tropical locations have been diagnosed with necrotizing fasciitis this summer, and one woman has died. Warmer water that breeds the bacteria in those locations has been mentioned as the reason for the infections, caused when people who have a skin wound were exposed to the bacteria in the water.

Carlsen said he hasn't left the state and has not been to any area pools or waterways. Doctors have not been able to tell him where he might have come in contact with the bacteria.

A member of St. Peter's Lutheran Church in Columbus, Carlsen said he has been appreciative of the support and encouragement he has been receiving from family and friends. He said he did not know how long he would be hospitalized as part of his recovery.

DIAGNOSIS OF NECROTIZING FASCIITIS

Early symptoms of necrotizing fasciitis can include:

A red or swollen area of skin that spreads quickly

Severe pain, including pain beyond the area of the skin that is red or swollen

Fever

See a doctor right away if you have these symptoms after an injury or surgery. Even though minor illnesses can cause symptoms like these, people should not delay getting medical care.

Later symptoms of necrotizing fasciitis can include:

Ulcers, blisters, or black spots on the skin

Changes in the color of the skin

Pus or oozing from the infected area

Dizziness

Fatigue (tiredness)

Diarrhea or nausea

PREVENTION

Here is what medical professionals advise to prevent a flesh-eating bacteria infection. Common sense and good wound care are the best ways to prevent a bacterial skin infection.

Clean all minor cuts and injuries that break the skin (like blisters and scrapes) with soap and water.

Clean and cover draining or open wounds with clean, dry bandages until they heal.

See a doctor for puncture and other deep or serious wounds.

Wash hands often with soap and water or use an alcohol-based hand rub if washing is not possible.

Care for fungal infections like athlete's foot.

If you have an open wound or skin infection, avoid spending time in:

Hot tubs

Swimming pools

Natural bodies of water (e.g., lakes, rivers, oceans)

Southern Indiana farmers turn to high tech to grow

By TARA SCHMELZ
(Jeffersonville & New Albany) News and Tribune

SOUTHERN INDIANA — At one point, tractors were seen as the future — a way for farmers to achieve so much more with less time and effort.

Now, farmers are turning to more advanced technology, called precision agriculture, to increase yields and profits.

The same kind of technology behind popular GPS systems in cars and neighborhood drones are helping farmers dig deeper and learn more about what the land needs. Once they know more, they can be more precise in how they move forward.

"I think [precision agriculture] is the way of the future," said Randy Wolfe Jr. "I think we're going to have to be up on all of it or be out."

Wolfe farms about 1,000 acres in Clark and Floyd counties in Southern Indiana. At 39 years old, he said he's farmed his whole life and new technologies are making it easier. Wolfe uses drones to scout his fields, checking the population of weeds and looking to see if any plants are having issues that need addressed.

He uses variable rate prescription maps for his fertilizer, to make sure the plants that need fertilizer get it, but the others get less or none at all. That saves on costs, as well as prevents more chemicals from being put in the ground than necessary. Variable-rate seeding technology allows Wolfe to plant more in areas where the soil is fertile and less in poor ground, helping with seed costs and yields.

All of that technology comes at a cost, but Wolfe said it's worth it.

"The world market is so competitive and there's a lot of other countries raising crops," Wolfe said. "I think we're going to have to be very progressive as American farmers to stay in the game and to also feed the booming population in this country, and there's less of us doing this anymore, so we have to do more to keep up."

COMPETITIVE ADVANTAGE

Bruce Erickson, Agronomy Education Distance & Outreach director with Purdue University, said he remembers his dad farming — using horses and picking his corn by hand. As Erickson helps mold future farmers at Purdue, he's seeing firsthand how quickly the technology is changing farming.

"Farming is a competitive business. If you're not using technology, you can't be as efficient as your neighbor or as efficient as other countries and eventually your farming enterprise will become unprofitable," Erickson said. "If you don't go to the new farming technologies, you'll be at a competitive disadvantage."

The cost of the new technologies is keeping farmer Dennis Konkle from coming on board with too much. The Greenville farmer of 800 acres of corn, soybeans, hay and cattle does use GPS via a local co-op to make sure he doesn't overlap herbicides or plant twice in the same spot, saving time as well as saving money.

"With technology comes a pretty costly price tag, so small farms have a hard time incorporating that kind of expense in their operations," Konkle said.

Konkle said larger farmers can better incorporate those costs, which allow them to sell their crops at a lower fee, forcing people like Konkle to also lower his price.

"It's harder for us to compete with that," he said.

Konkle said he's looking forward to adding more technology to make farming more profitable.

"The technology will get cheaper," he said.

For Wolfe, the savings are well worth the initial investment. According to National Geographic, small farms with 800 acres using precision agricultural technology saw an annual savings of $11,000, with typical-sized farms of 1,600 acres saving $26,000. However, costs to implement that kind of technology can vary, depending on type of technology and location of the farm. Wolfe estimates that the cost can be as cheap as $3/acre to $20/acre, depending on how much technology is implemented.

"It is expensive, but it makes us more profitable. We're being very cost-effective and trying to be good stewards to the soil in the long run," Wolfe said, referring to using less chemicals and protecting the ground from erosion. "We're trying to make the ground better when we leave it, thnn when we got it ... It's a long-term investment. [With] me being a younger farmer, it'll pay off in the long run."

PROTECTING THE FUTURE

Erickson said farmers in general are natural to adapting to the new technology.

"They like gadgets in general. They've had to run equipment and fix stuff," he said. "[However,] they don't want to sit behind a computer all day and fuss with this stuff. They like the efficiency and how they can better farm their fields."

As for the future of farming technology, Erickson is predicting more automation and traceability. With many automobile makers turning to robots, he sees that as something that may come to farms as well, helping with the rising costs and shortage of labor. He said using better ways to trace where food was raised will help consumers know more about what they are consuming, while also helping identify exact locations of affected products in the event of a recall.

"There's some times, occasionally, when I start thinking about things that I think — 'wow. I'm actually living in the future'. There's a lot of stuff that's come on very fast," Erickson said. "It's allowing farmers to be better at what they do — feed the world and take care of the environment."

Wolfe agrees.

"We need to be good stewards," Wolfe said. "There's no more ground being made, so we have to take care of what we've been given for the next generations to follow."

2020 Census count

Much at stake for Columbus and Bartholomew County

By SHELBY MULLIS
(Columbus) The Republic

Local officials are urging Bartholomew County residents to complete the U.S. Census survey when the census postcards hit mailboxes next March.

Columbus Mayor Jim Lienhoop said getting an accurate census count for the city is crucial for the city, and the county, to obtain federal funding for large road and bridge projects.

Since 2017, Lienhoop estimated the city has received more than $20 million in federal funding for various road and bridge projects and an additional $250,000 to $285,000 in federal funding for Community Development Block Grant funding.

Projects include improvements at the I-65 and State Road 58 intersection, the historic bridge that is now a pedestrian crossing over Haw Creek in Columbus — a project years in the making, road projects on Rocky Ford and Taylor roads and Indiana Avenue, and signal work at State Road 46 and State Road 11.

"That's $20 million of work for projects that were 80 percent funded by federal funds," Lienhoop said. "And all of it was awarded based on population. We need to have as accurate a count as we can, to get what we are eligible for, from the federal government."

Bartholomew County transportation planner Laura Thayer said these transportation dollars come by way of the Indiana Department of Transportation, which is tasked with dividing the funds among the state's counties after the federal government allocates money to each state.

All of this is done through a formula based on population numbers garnered by the census. Thayer said she's unsure whether anyone could predict the impact of population decline identified by the census.

In a hypothetical situation, Thayer said if one state's population was under counted, then that state could possibly lose some of its funding.

Currently, Thayer said the Columbus Area Metropolitan Planning Organization, which leads the transportation planning process on behalf of the City of Columbus and Bartholomew County, receives both planning funding and construction funding.

"Next year our federal apportionment is going to be $160,000 for planning," Thayer said. "Our construction funding is going to be about $1.8 million. Those are federal funds. We also have a local match. What the construction money goes to is projects that have been identified through a planning process."

Thayer said the planning process gives the public an opportunity to have input on what projects need to be completed.

But the census does more than just determine where Congress should allocate federal dollars.

The state receives nearly $18 billion in annual federal funding based on population data from the U.S. Census Bureau. Data collected in 2020 will determine how much Indiana could receive until the next census in 2030.

The fewer people counted, the less money allocated to the state to fund programs such as Medicaid, highway projects, and programs supporting low-income housing and school lunches.

Lienhoop said Columbus continues to grow, as do other communities around Indiana, with Columbus experiencing about 1,000 new residents moving here a year. The current estimated population is 47,143, but that could bump up substantially depending on the count.

The U.S. Census Bureau estimated a total population of 82,753 people in Bartholomew County in 2018 — an estimated 7.8% increase since the 2010 census.

"We've just been dealing with estimates since the last census," Lienhoop said.

In addition to having a better idea on how many people live in the city, Lienhoop said the census also tells city officials how diverse the community is in a 10-year snapshot.

The census will also provide data as to income levels and provide hints as to the type of programs and services Columbus needs based on population data, Lienhoop said.

WANT TO WORK FOR THE CENSUS?

The U.S. Census Bureau is recruiting people to apply for temporary positions as work begins for the 2020 Census.

As of March 4, more than 170,000 recruits had already completed job applications to qualify for temporary census jobs and more than 800 had been hired, according to the U.S. Census Bureau.

More will be hired through the year for jobs in the spring and summer of 2020. That's when census workers knock on doors to interview people who don't respond to the census.

Schedules are flexible depending on the job, and the pay averages $15 to $19 per hour.

Individuals who are at least 18 years old, have a valid Social Security number and are a U.S. citizen are eligible to apply. Anyone selected will have to pass a background check.

To apply, visit 2020census.gov/en/jobs or call 855-JOB-2020 and select option 3 for more information.

Gone in a flash: Short lifespan for pop-up fireworks shops

By DYLAN TRIMPE
(Anderson) Herald Bulletin

ANDERSON — Familiar sites pop up in late June and then disappear days after Independence Day — fireworks shops.

Some open a little earlier so they can get a jump on sales to folks who love making things explode. Others don't show up until the week of the Fourth of July. Even more are permanent operations; their "seasons" simply change as the year goes on.

For Shamus Clark, who works at a pop-up fireworks shop off 18th Street and Scatterfield Road, his last day will be Sunday. That's when he was told by Muncie-based North Central Industries (NCI) that he would be done selling fireworks.

NCI also has the Boomer's Fireworks and Great Grizzly stores .

Once Friday, July 5 arrived, Clark and many other firework pop-up shops went into sell-off mode.

Most of the fireworks that aren't sold will be stocked on the shelves of the Boomer's Fireworks location in Muncie.

One of Clark's friends works for NCI full-time and suggested selling fireworks as a way to make a little extra money during the holiday season.

NCI provides fireworks to anyone who purchases a minimum of $3,000 worth of fireworks and has a permit to sell them through the Indiana Department of Homeland Security. Permits filed online are only good for one calendar year.

More information for fireworks permits can be found online at https://www.in.gov/dhs/3340.htm

Clark, who is disabled, will go back to his day-to-day job once he closes up shop. However, he's enjoyed his first year selling fireworks.

Janson Fuller picks out fireworks at a pop-up store in the old Blockbuster Video at 18th Street and Scatterfield Road in Anderson on Friday. (Staff photo by Don Knight)

Diane Kilbourne, who manages Lit Fireworks at 53rd Street and Scatterfield Road, wasn't able to comment on when the shop's final day was going to be or if they were going to have a sale.

Kilbourne and her crew are in their third year selling fireworks, the second at their current location, and she mentioned how much fun she has seeing folks walk into her store and seeing their faces light up.

Fireworks have a fairly long shelf life if they're kept dry as the biggest threat to the gunpowder inside a firework is moisture.

One of Kilbourne's employees, who would only give his first name as Mark, pointed out that undetonated bombs and mines from past wars are dug up all the time. He insisted all of the fireworks they sell do not have an expiration date despite some of them having a best buy date.

Still, even though gunpowder doesn't have an expiration date, it's not recommended to light up a found firework unless it is known that it was stored properly.

Even if fireworks are stored properly in dry places, severe changes in temperature can affect the stability of the gunpowder inside.

Kilbourne and her employees mentioned the fireworks that aren't sold before the store closes at the end of the week are either shipped back to their shop's parent company or are trashed if they're not viable.

Unused, misfired or "dud" fireworks are not to be thrown into the trash without taking a few steps beforehand.

It's suggested to completely submerge fireworks in a large bucket of water and soaking them until they are thoroughly saturated. Depending on the size of the firework, this could take 15 minutes or overnight.

Then, to prevent the fireworks from drying out, wrap them in plastic wrap or two plastic bags. Place the double-bagged fireworks in the trash or take them to a solid waste facility. Other disposal options can be found by contacting local fire departments or solid waste facilities.

Any fireworks that are planned to be stored should be stored in a cool, dry place. Storing them on top of an electrical appliance is not recommended since the appliance could become damaged through severe weather such as lightning or power surges, resulting in the ignition of the fireworks.

BRIDGE

WINNING MIGHT BE A TWO-STAGE PROCESS

Wayne Dyer, a self-help author and motivational speaker, said, "When you dance, your object is not to get to a certain place on the floor. It's to enjoy each step along the way."

When you play bridge, you know where you wish to reach -- the number of tricks you need to make or break the contract. If you succeed, you will enjoy yourself.

How should East and West end this deal happily by defeating four spades?

The auction was straightforward. South had a minimum for his two-spade response. His six-card suit was good, but the singleton diamond and low tripleton in clubs were minuses. North jumped to four spades, knowing that they had the values for game and at least an eight-card spade fit (South would have made a negative double with only four spades).

The defense started with a few simple steps. West led his club three. East won with his ace and returned the club two, his lowest card being a suit-preference signal for diamonds, the lower-ranking of the other two side suits. West ruffed and, being a well-trained partner, returned a diamond, which East won with his ace. But what did he do next?

Counting the points, East knew that his partner presumably had no honor-card. So the only chance for a fourth defensive winner lay in the trump suit. East, remembering that when you want partner to ruff, you should lead a loser, not a winner, continued with the club six. When West ruffed with the spade four, it effected an uppercut. Dummy had to overruff with the spade king, and East's spade queen had been promoted as a winner.

Well danced!

Music, carnival, tents - it's Regatta

Sounds from and for ALL AGES

The Roostertail Music Festival continues to grow as an even bigger part of Madison Regatta festivities, but this year's three nights of music may have launched the career of a 10-year-old Madisonian with music in his genes. Jack Z, the son of Madison musicians Kriss Luckett-Ziesemer and Greg Ziesemer, was hanging around backstage with his guitar and his dad on Thursday night, Kriss explained. Jack and a woman backstage started talking about music and the woman soon realized Jack's zeal for it. The woman asked Jack if he might be interested in singing the "The Star-Spangled Banner" at Roostertail. Kriss said Jack declined, saying he didn't think he could do that. But, in the conversation, Jack mentioned his love of the work of Jimi Hendrix. The woman asked Jack if he would like, instead of singing, to play "The Star-Spangled Banner." That, Kriss said, led to a discussion of the legendary rendition Hendrix gave to close the Woodstock Music Festival, which will celebrate next month its 50th anniversary. Jack didn't know about that performance, Kriss said, but he agreed to go home, study that Hendrix moment and play on the Regatta stage Saturday night ... and he did (photo right). Both proud parents have posted the video to their Facebook pages. Jack Z found himself following Brent Cobb's act and just before headliner Whiskey Myers. Jamie Lin Wilson (below left) and Mike and the Moonpies (below right) were part of the Friday night sounds. A nighttime view of the riverbank (top photo), the carnival rides, the tents and the other festivities captured the atmosphere of fun. (Top photo by Mark Campbell; other photos by Connor Jacobs)

It's Fair time!

The heart and soul of county fairs are the people who work tirelessly all year to make the events come together for one week in July.

At the center of that are the 4-H clubs and members.

This year's 2019 Jefferson County 4-H Fair officially opens July 8 and continues through July 13.

This special section of The Madison Courier provides a look at the 4-H club members. These young people, their families, club leaders, friends, supporters and the Jefferson County Extension Service all make it happen while providing learning and life experiences for the young people. Some of these young people are part of families that have embraced and supported 4-H club work for generations.

Inside you will find the clubs and their members.

You also will meet the 10-year members who are now wistfully saying goodbye to their formal enrollment in projects, work that has inspired many with plans for their future careers.

And, what would a fair be without the queen and her court? The royalty this year is made up of young women who are all 4-H club participants. You also will see them helping out in multiple ways all week long at the fair.

So, what exactly is 4-H club work? It's best explained in the words of the Purdue University Extension office, which is the overseer of 4-H in Indiana:

4-H began over 100 years ago, and has since grown into the largest youth development program in the nation. 4-H prepares young people to be leaders in their community and around the world through hands-on experiences alongside their peers and caring adults. Backed by a network of more than 6 million youth, 540,000 adult volunteers, 3,500 professionals, and more than 60 million alumni, 4-H delivers research-based programming around positive youth development. 4-H is delivered through America's 109 land-grant universities and the Cooperative Extension Service — reaching every corner of our nation. In Indiana, 4-H can be found in all 92 counties as delivered through Purdue Extension. Community clubs, afterschool programs, school enrichment, camps/workshops, and special interest programs are all ways youth across Indiana can be involved with the 4-H program.
